Meeting data residency requirements

Make the important decisions about where you keep your files

Comply with regional regulation

Workshare-approved or private storage

Select locations at an individual level

To meet data residency requirements, you need to be able to choose where files are stored.

With Workshare, you can stay compliant with regional regulations by storing files in a secure location that makes sense for your business and the individuals who work in it.

Offices in London, New York and Sydney? No problem.

We have a secure, Workshare-approved geographic storage location for you. If you prefer though, you can keep all your files, and the data in them, on your own private or on-premise storage locations.

Workshare offers flexibility over where you store the files you create and share.

Global clients who have offices in multiple regions can store data in distinct regions for regulatory, customer policy and performance reasons.

Your data storage strategy can be defined at an individual level, assigning users or groups of user in different geographies to multiple Workshare-approved locations or your own private/on-premise locations. Any new file or versions of a file uploaded will then be stored according to the place that's been specified.

The Workshare data residency option means you can select different storage locations for individual users, giving you greater flexibility while ensuring compliance.

Select data storage locations by individual user –

To give you maximum flexibility, you can select at an individual level where files are stored.

Choose a Workshare-approved location or your own location –

You can choose from a selection of Workshare-approved geographic locations, or choose your own private or on-premise storage solutions.

Local storage is available globally

No matter where you're based globally, Workshare can offer you a secure local data storage option.
